- A HOLIDAY REPLECTION .

UNLIKE SO MANY OTHER THINGS THE QUESTION OF JU-DICIOUSNESS CANNOT IMPEDE THE GIFT OF A

WRAP, JACKET, NEWMARKET,

OR ANYTHING CALCULATED TO WARM AND BEAUTIFY.

Our holiday season of last year (which probably surprised and exceeded general expectation) demonstrated to us the increasing tendency to more substantial gifts; and while our display at that time probably surpassed what had been customary theretofore, our arrangements for our patrons this year, we feel assured, will be found to exceed those of last, both as to extent and richness of styles. We have decided to make Tuesday a memorable day in the Wrap Department by offering at extremely low prices, now in the height of the season, some irresistible the pit mouth weeping bitterly and mourning the pit mouth weeping bitterly and mourning their dead. Here they have stood through the long, dreary night, heedless of the many entreaties made to them to return to their homes. They seem to have forgetten everything save that deep in the mine below them lie the bodies of those who are dear to them. Many of those who rushed to the pit when the news of the disaster first spread have returned to their death stricken homes, reverently following the bodies of their relatives and friends that the rescuing parties have succeeded in taking from the pit.

The hope that some of the miners, who had been imprisoned by the falling walls of the the bodies is necessarily slow, the efforts of the rescners being greatly hindered by the im-mense masses of debris which encumber the passages. Since midnight last night fifteen bodies have been taken from the pit. The scene when they were lifted to the surface was most heartrending. The weeping, sobbing women would cluster around the bodies hoping, yet dreading, to recognize in the smoke-blackened and sometimes burned faces of the dead the features of some dear one. The scene was one that had been enacted hundreds of times in coal fields and That "Consumption can be cured if taken in time"
